Didsbury Men Win Championships

The Didsbury district was not only well represented at the horse show held in Calgary last week but Didsbury horse and cattle men succeeded in capturing some Championships as well as first money in several of the classes.

Mr. Clarence Stuart won Championship and First prize for his Percheron Stallion and also First prize for his Polled Angus bull.

Mr. Dave Sheppard won First prize and Reserve Championship with his Belgian Stallion.

Mr. Charlie Brown, of Westcott, won First and Reserve Championship in Canadian bred and also in open competition with a registered Clyde mare.

Mr. Jack Berscht won a second prize with one of his little Shetland ponies which had to compete against the Prince of Wales showing of ponies.

Athletic Club Meeting

A meeting of the Didsbury Athletic Club was held on Monday evening. After the election of officers the only business taken up was a discussion as to whether the Club would take up baseball or football. As far as getting up teams was concerned they could get up one for either game. Baseball however seemed to be more to the liking of the younger men, football has been let drop this last year or two but still has a good many supporters and it is certain that most of the business men, who are nearly all old football fans, still have a great liking for the game. It was decided to take up baseball and it was decided to find out for certain which they were going to play before taking up one or the other of the sports here.

The following officers were elected:

Pres. J. McGhee, Vice Pres. C. Reiber, Secy. Treas. E. Freeman, Executive: J. H. Lowrie, H. W. Chambers, N. A. Cook, C. Studer, J. V. Berscht, T. Thompson, Dr. Durand and G. Harrison, Finance Committee: H. W. Chambers, W. G. Liesemer, J. V. Berscht and N. A. Cook.

Miller Wins Basketball Competition

Friday evening saw the last game of the Memorial Club Basketball series played for the Cup, in which C. Studer's team clashed with Bill Miller's and lost. The game was fast from beginning to end, and there were all stars. Bill Miller's team however must have been saving up all their playing for this game and had a little the best of it, during the last period rushing the play and winning the Cup by a score of 22-17. The line up for the teams is given below.

Miller's Captain, Earl Freeman, Bill Mueller, M. Watts, C. Reiber and A. Clemens, C. Studer, Captain, J. Brett, O. Weber, C. Bricker, A. Watson and E. Freeman.

The Bankers basketball team have challenged the Cup team and the game, which will be a good one, is to be played on Tuesday night. 25c and 10c admission will be charged to cover the expenses of jerseys for the teams.

Tennis Club Annual Meeting

A meeting of the Didsbury Tennis Club was held Tuesday evening in the Royal Bank. Officers were elected and some business discussed. It has not been found out as yet whether or the C.P.R. will allow them the use of the Park for their grounds or not, but it is thought conditions are Providing they get these grounds it will be advisable to form two courts on the other side of the band stand, as if they get their increased membership over last year, which they undoubtedly will do, it is going to cause much dissatisfaction among the players who are going to be kept waiting so long for their set. This was only under discussion however and it was pointed out that there was a considerable amount needed for the first two courts to be built in proper condition, new benches, sidings, etc. The membership fee was fixed at the same rate as last year, gentlemen $1.00 and ladies $2.00. CANADA SHOULD KEEP HER WARTIME LEAD

In 1920 Canada supplied Great Britain with exactly twice as much bacon as Denmark did. This is a great change since the pre-war year of 1913, when Denmark sent into Great Britain over eleven times the Canadian total.

The fact that our product has made marked advance in popularity in the most discriminating and constant of the overseas market cannot be too widely known in the Dominion. A report from Manchester by Canadian Trade Commissioner, J. E. Ray says: "That there will be a bigger demand for bacon cured abroad there can be no doubt. The stock of live pigs held in the United Kingdom, on everyone knows, is very low."

Hog producers in Canada have effectively "thrown the hat into the ring". They must now fearlessly make good their challenge to their competitors in our principal export market. If they do so by intelligently raising the type of hog which can successfully place the required class of lean and fat bacon on the English market against competitors in the United States and Denmark, there need be little doubt about the outcome of the undertaking. The opportunity for expansion is obvious for the tables show that even in our record year of 1919 we only furnished about one-third of the bacon imported into Great Britain.

U.F.A. and Labor May Co-Operate in this Riding

Directors of the U. F. A. District Association of the federal ridings of East and West Calgary, which includes Didsbury and district, held a meeting last week in Calgary at which the following resolution was passed:—

"That the U. F. A. District Association of East and West Calgary co-operate with organized labor, or other group organizations for the purpose of electing representatives to the Dominion parliament."

We also recommend that it be further understood that the representative of each group be responsible only for their political actions and policies to their own respective group.

"We also recommend that each or any of the other group organizations in East and West Calgary suggest to their respective organizations in other constituencies the wisdom of reciprocal action along similar lines. If the Calgary branch of the Dominion Labor party accept this it will be submitted to the U. F. A. locals in the ridings and if a two-thirds majority is secured this arrangement will go through."

THE RED PIGEON—THE YOUNG PRIEST AND HIS
CONVERTS—THE DEATH
OF RED PIGEON—A PLEDGE FULFILLED.

Last Things

Old Meekoo-Maynee (The Red Pigeon) had passed away, and now her body must have Christian burial. She had drawn her annuity for the last time, had eaten her last bannock, had quaffed her last cup of tea, had smoked her last pipe, and for the last time had kissed her crucifix, counted her beads, and said her last prayer.

Early Missions

Thirty years before this occurrence a young priest of the Roman Catholic Church, fresh from college at Montreal, and from his apostolic ordination by the Reverend Fathers, had reached the Qu'Appelle Mission, ready and eager to spend his young life for the betterment of the Metis in their scattered settlements, or for the enlightenment of the wandering tribes of Indians who roamed at will over the summer prairie in pursuit of the buffalo, or who traversed the winter forests as trappers and hunters.

A Unique Mission Field

For fifteen years his life from early Spring until latest Autumn was spent among the roving bands of both half-breeds and savages, whose sole occupation during those months was pursuing and killing the buffalo, the hides of which they converted into robes prepared for the markets of all northern climes, and whose flesh they preserved as pemican for sale at the Company's posts, often to be resold, in the following winter, to the Indian at a handsome profit, in the event of a scarcity of food.

Living The Simple Life

As the red men thus wandered, hither and thither, year after year, over the boundless prairies, the young priest went where they went, slept where they slept, ate where and what they ate, learned their language and their modes of thought, baptized their infants and buried their dead.

From the Known to the Unknown

Building on the Indian's marvelous conception of the Great Manitou, he told them of His fatherly beneficence, of the Mangar Babe at Bethlehem, His wonderful life among the poor, His deeds of love and mercy, His ignominious death and His return to "Keeche-Keesik—Awoosata" (The Land Beyond the Big Sky).

Converts

The simple pathos of his story appealed to and won many a savage heart. Scores of converts were baptized. Among the latter was Meekoo-Maynee, the Red Pigeon. And now, a quarter of a century later, she had "ceased to live" and her body awaited Christian burial, because an injunction had been laid upon the tribes that when any of these baptized converts met death, no matter in what part of the country it must be reported to the nearest priest or mission, so that the body might be laid away in consecrated ground, in a marked grave, and guarded from the depredations of the ravenous beasts of forest or plain.

A Dry Country

The summer of 1889 was a period of dry scorching weather. Vegetation was parched by the intense heat, and where in the spring time hundreds of sloughs had been filled with water, only immense areas of baked, earth, showing fissures of almost incredible length could be seen.

A Problem

The Indians of File Hills were face to face with a serious problem. Their hay meadows had been burnt up by the fervent heat apparently their splendid herd of six hundred cattle was doomed to starvation in the coming winter.

For weeks the situation was the subject of grave consideration by department officials.

The Solution

The final decision reached was that the whole Indian encampment, of over 300 people—men, women and children—with all their cattle and horses must migrate thirty miles north to Horse Hills, where hundreds of lakelets, filled with water had been located where grass grew high as a horse's back and where timber in abundance could be found suitable alike for fuel and for building purposes.

The White Chief

The task of supervising this great trek and bringing it to a successful issue was placed upon the Farm Instructor, Mr. Richard McConnell, who became the "White Chief" of the community until the following Spring. Thousands of tons of hay were stacked and protected by miles of fire guards, and hundreds of houses and stables erected. Immense quantities of food were freighted from the Government warehouse at the south.

Death In The Camp

During the long, cold, tedious winter the average number of deaths occurred—that of Red Pigeon being one.

An Indian Runner

Fifty miles south to the mission at Lebret, an Indian messenger was sent to Father Hugonard, the one time priest of the buffalo hunting days. He arrived at dusk.

Keeping a Pledge

The Rev. Father made immediate preparation for an early daylight start north. During the night an awful blizzard developed. Three priests resident at the mission each in turn brought the Father for the privilege of going in his stead.

Deeds Not Words

While uncertainty prevailed as to which of the three might be chosen, one stole away to the stables, harnessed and hitched a horse to the sleight and appearing at the mission door, simply said, "Good Father, give me your blessing, I am off."

Some Journey

The winds blew and the blizzards raged, and all roads and trails were obliterated, but into the teeth of the storm went this devoted young priest to make good the pledge of the Church given years before to a benighted Indian woman. His first night was spent in a bluff, where his well blanketed horse partook of a generous feed of oats, then lay down on the snow to rest. The priest himself, behind his temporary windbreak, was able to kindle a fire and thaw out sufficient food for his supper. The second night was passed under similar conditions.

Arrival and Return

On the morning of the fourth day the priest was ready to start on his return journey. Again two long night vigils were spent in the open air, his only companions being his horse and the frozen corpse of the Indian woman.

The Home Stretch

On the morning of the sixth day the intrepid son of the Church struck out across an open plain of 20 miles extent, over which the tireless winds whistled and shrieked as they carried the blind snow here, there, and everywhere. At noon he found the head of Larocque Coulee, and descended into the shelter of the Qu'Appelle valley.

Duty Done

At noon he reached the mission, and staggering fell across the threshold, utterly exhausted. He had suffered much, but his self-imposed task was finished and the body of Meekoo-Maynee The Red Pigeon, received Christian burial.

Motely Crowds Meet in Vancouver

Thousands of men and a few women took part in a parade and open air demonstration staged in Vancouver in welcome to W. A. Pritchard, Vancouver strike leader, recently released from Stonewall, Man., penitentiary. The motley procession, made up of men of many nationalities, included Chinese and Japanese. A brass band and a man on horseback headed the throng, which peaceably gathered at the Cambie Street football grounds and listened to speeches.

Legalize Marriage

The government at Athens will ask the National Assembly to legalize the marriage of the late King Alexander and Madelon Aspasia Manos, who has given birth to a daughter, in order to establish the right of the child to inherit the late king's fortune, it is announced.

Strong Box Equipped With Burglar Alarm

A Berlin inventor has just placed on the market a portable steel box which is equipped with an alarm which can be set before the lid is closed. When the box is lifted or moved over so slightly the alarm sounds and can be stopped only by unlatching the box and adjusting the mechanism which controls the buzzer. Hotel guests are buying the strong box and placing it against their doors at night or setting it on luggage which they wish to protect. The boxes are produced in various sizes and with alarms varying in strength from an ordinary buzzer to a fire alarm gong.

A Dream Elizabeth Had

It had been a hard day for Elizabeth. The children seemed to get on her nerves as never before. She had seemed to be shrieking at them more or less the livelong day and they had at last departed for bed amid howls of protestation and tears, which had ended in Billy sobbing himself to sleep after receiving a few smart slaps with the strap and as she had turned the light out in the bedroom she caught glimpses of two very sorrowful faces half buried in the pillows of their respective cots. Then a baby had been unusually cross and she had had a twenty minutes tussle with him before, quite exhausted he had managed to go to sleep.

Supper was all laid on the table; the kettle was singing on the stove. Elizabeth sat down in the arm-chair and closed her eyes. How dragging and tiring it all was. Suring was coming too. It did not conjure up to her visions of herself in new garments. No, she was thinking wearily whether her old suit which had seen service for four years, was worth the two dollars charged for spicing and pressing, and which with her old sailor hat refurbished a little with a coat of hat black and a new pair of shoes, would would have to serve for her spring outfit.

Then she began feverishly to count out what would be necessary for the children, and having concluded that between thirty and forty dollars would have to be spent she tried to stop stretching her mind to the unstretchable dollar. But her mind would go whirling and whirling around the subject no matter how she tried to stop it. What a day it had been. She had hunched her shoulders then to the happy carefree days she had spent before her marriage, when her body had not known this terrible ache; when she could be alone and quiet to her heart's content; when she loved to read and had plenty of time for it. Now there seemed no end to the housework and the children, yes, she loved them, but at times she longed to go away and not to see them for a whole week. Yes, she thought feverishly how blissful it would be to have a week of absolute rest and quiet.

Elizabeth looked up startled. Billy stood in the doorway leading from the stairs. He was such a dear, chubby little chap. Every one congratulated her on his good health. Elizabeth knew that it was mostly due to plain, regular food, and plenty of sleep, but many of her friends who adopted slipshod methods with their children seemed to think it was some special dispensation of Providence which gave the Allans such "good luck," as they termed it, with their children's health. But Billy looked very pale and a stricture seemed to seize Elizabeth's heart as he walked slowly towards her, his eyes unusually large and solemn, and his fair hair gleaming in the electric light. He crept up beside her and put his two arms around her neck. Elizabeth tried to speak, but the words would not come. She wanted to tell him to hurry back to bed, that he must not get up after she had put him there, but her lips were powerless and would not frame the words.

"Mumsie," he said, so gently and quietly for four years old. "I need things, you know you told me 'bout the happy land one day where little children like me play and have all sorts of nice things. I think I would like to go. Your poor head gets so tired when I play down here and I am so naughty, but I does love you Mumsie, an' if I go 'way to the happy land I won't forget you, and I'll think of all the nice cuddles you gave me and how sweet you were when you smiled at me and when you were not tired. I spects Mumsie I'll get lonely up there and want to come back, but you'll be able to have a rest when there are not so many of us." Then the little figure faded away and Elizabeth dragged, it seemed leaden feet upstairs to look in Billy's cot, but Billy had gone. Mary was sitting looking with frightened eyes crying "I wants my little bryver."

"Oh-o-o-o," cried Elizabeth and she sat up in the chair with a start. The kettle was still boiling and her husband was bending over her, smiling but with anxiety in his gaze.

"Why little woman whatever is wrong?" he exclaimed.

"Oh Billy, Billy!" she said, and sped upstairs, Jim following her two steps at a time.

"Well, what's the matter with Billy?" demanded he, as he gazed down at a very substantial and rosy small edition of himself, who was sleeping the sleep of the just, apparently quite forgetful and oblivious to the cares of the exhaustive day through which he had passed.

"Oh dear," said Elizabeth happily, "I had such a horrid dream and I thought I had lost Billy. I'll never grumble again about the work of the children, never again. "Poor old girl," you have had a pretty trying time and you need a rest," said Jim, as he put his arm protectively around her going down the stairs.

Elizabeth sighed. Poor old Jim, he would give her the earth if he had it, that was one consolation. He did not take it for granted that she should slave and pinch, but far seemed to have taken their destiny out of their hands, and she supposed they would go struggling along, poor farmers until the end of time.

Elizabeth went about her tea-making and tried to be more cheerful. Indeed she was more cheerful because her dream bringing to her the possibility of losing one of the children who were so sweet and wholesome and loving, caused her to realize that there were worse things than being poor and hard worked, very much worse. In fact she felt they were but pinpricks compared to the greater sorrow which might have been hers and which others had to undergo. Engaged with her own thoughts as she sat down to the tea-table which she always arranged so neatly, she possibly, feeling it was a mistake to slump in these small particulars even if one did live on a lonely farm, she did not notice that there was an unwonted light in her husband's eyes, and that he seemed to be bubbling over with some news which he could hardly keep to himself much longer.

"How would you like to go and visit your folks for a month?" Elizabeth looked up startled. "Oh Jim dear, what's the use of talking. It would cost two hundred dollars for the fare alone, and then—she did not add the rest, but her face filled with tears, and Jim quite understood. She did not want to appear before her folks and the people who had known her as a light-hearted, well dressed girl, in her old clothes, and Jim knew as well as she did that it would take a good deal to replenish her wardrobe.

"I have some good news for you," Jim said slowly, "they have sold the old field to the Billings lane and I have sold it today for a hundred thousand dollars."

"Oh Jim," gasped Elizabeth, "how wonderful." Then the little tired woman collapsed and sobbed as though her heart would break. "I don't deserve it," she cried, "I don't, I have been so bitter, so repining, and so ungrateful. First I had the dream to show me the value of my children, and now this."

"You do deserve it," maintained Jim, "and you are going to have a good rest. We'll get some of the old children right off your hands for a month or so, and you can go off alone to visit your mother."

"I don't want to go alone now," said Elizabeth. "I never want to leave any of you."

"Well then, we'll all go to see your mother. She'll be glad to have us, and we'll get someone to take care of the youngsters there."

And the sky was serene and quiet over the rickety old house which contained so much of human joy; and the moonbeams slanted graciously in at the window on the faces of the sleeping babes, and sprang and leaped over the souls of tired motherhood rejoiced with the two struggling mortals who rejoiced.

THE WEEK'S NEWS IN TERSE TERMS

Heavy Toll Through Explosion of Lamp

The explosion of a gasoline lamp is the reputed cause of a destructive fire which destroyed the home of Mrs. J. M. Sheperd at Lonsome Butte, and a barn belonging to Roy Hewson on the other side of the road. A Maxwell car which was in the barn was also totally destroyed. It was but a few minutes after the explosion that the house was in the grip of roaring flames which leaped high in the air and across the road, where they seized upon the Hewson barn, raising it to the ground in a very short space. Mr. Sheperd, owner of the house in which the explosion occurred, is at present on a visit to Chicago. The total loss which resulted has been estimated at not less than $5,000, of which only about $1,500 is covered by insurance.

Proceeds of Liquor Sales

It is reported that many of the larger cities and towns of British Columbia will be in the hands of receivers before they can receive their share of liquor profits, unless they are given immediate financial relief. The municipal delegation urged that a tax of five cents a day on all workers, $15 a year on others and $15 a year on all corporations be levied to pay for cost of schools and hospitals.

Warns Paper Profiteers

A warning to the pulp and paper companies of the province and other profiteers was recently sounded in the legislature by David Whitehead (New Westminster) in the course of a stirring address on the budget. Money in Bank Fifty Years

In the records of the Canadian Bank of Commerce it is set down that a James Swift, a farmer near Hamilton in the year 1870 drove to the branch of the bank at Hamilton and deposited $595. On his way home his horse bolted and Mr. Swift was killed. Five years later the bank, not having heard a word about the deposited money, commenced to advertise for the relatives of the deceased farmer, but until the present time no one has come forward to claim the money which at compound interest for the past fifty years now amounts to a good sum.

Kissing Causes Sleeping Sickness

Dr. Willoughby, in a lecture at Eastbourne, states that kissing is responsible for the spread of sleeping sickness. "Cerebro-spinal fever, or sleeping sickness is due to a germ found at the back of the nose," said Dr. Willoughby, "it induces a kind of stupor and is conveyed to other people by kissing."

Use of Swords Forbidden

Chief S. J. Dickson of Toronto, intends to literally enforce the criminal code with regard to having or using offensive weapons without a license. The agitation which led up to the order was a scene in one of the local theatres where a revolver was used on the stage. The chief has sent a circular to all the theatre managers in amendment to the code. It is understood that was put through primarily to guard against youths obtaining wild ideas from seeing a revolver or knife flashed on the stage and under the amendment the theatres have fallen.

Should Be in Jail

No Free Passage Given Immigrants

Colonel L. S. Amery, colonial under-secretary, when questioned recently in the House of Commons regarding free passages to the Dominion, stated that no free passages were granted without the approval of the representatives of the Dominions. The Government was aware, he admitted, that unemployment existed on a considerable scale in the Dominions and as a result of the attitude of the Dominion representatives, large classes of industrial workers had been refused passage. Some industrial workers had gone to the Dominions at their own expense and found themselves in difficulties, but the machinery set up by the Government had done its part in discouraging the workers from going hence to the equally congested centers overseas, Colonel Amery said. Asked concerning the rights to maintenance of deserted wives of colonial soldiers, Colonel Amery replied that further legislation on the matter awaited passing of reciprocal legislation by the Dominions.

Intimate Little Tales

SOME EXPERIENCES OF HUMAN INTEREST UNDERGONE IN EVERY-DAY LIFE BY EVERY-DAY PEOPLE

Frank Waring stepped out of his hotel and walked slowly up the busy street. It was Easter, but there was nothing Easter-like in the atmosphere or surroundings, unless it might be the dusty chocolate eggs and chickens and the other little cotton wool confections which seemed on this miserable day to be looking out disconsolately on the sloppy sidewalks where people dodged each other universally, bringing out of necessity, certainly not of choice, on this raw, muggy March day. Here and there an unfortunate infant looked blue-nosed out of a perambulator or a still more unfortunate small child was being hurriedly yanked along by a mother who was doing some belated shopping and whose guilty conscience told her it was no day for the child to be on the street.

Waring shrugged his shoulder. So this was the city! Whatever made sane people live in them, and he sighed. His mind travelled to his little white cottage on a sloping hill, away in the country. There was a garden, an old-fashioned garden and a front gate. Frank Waring had been very insistent about the front gate. There was plenty of ground about too and bushes in the background, and how comfortable Alice used to make him. Well, there weren't many sisters like Alice, and it was only natural that some other fellow should find out how sweet she was and what a good pal she would make. She was happily married, that was one comfort. He couldn't expect her to stay single all her life just to please him, but he wondered whether in all the world there was a woman who could make a sitting room at Eastertide the cosy place he remembered the sitting room at "The Cottage," last Easter, as the flames from the fireplace flickered on the dark wood of the furniture and against the soft rich brown of the rug. He could not remember all the details, but there had been Easter lilies and violets, soft music and companionship. All had been cold and grey without, but inside was home and contentment. Bitterly he thought he would never know it again. There had been in his life three women—His mother, his sister—and one other. Ten years had passed since that Eastertide so full of disappointment and misunderstanding when she had betrothed herself to his rival. He could have staked his life on her goodness and sweetness, could have staked his life that here eyes had told him the old, old story but at the last minute she had coldly turned from him to an older and as they then thought, a wealthier man.

"Is this my birthday Mummy?" "George darling," responded Lily Drayton as she looked affectionately at the small hand that curled up on the couch watching thoughtfully every movement of her quick, capable fingers moving swiftly over the keyboard of her typewriter.

And in a minute, just when I do one more line little man, I am going out to get something really like a feast for our birthday supper, "yours and mine."

"That will be lovely," commented the little lad, so sober and so wise, for six. Very lively was the face of his young-looking mother as she bent intently over the script she was copying carefully, but there was a trace of sorrow in the set of the mobile lips and a tragedy in the depths of the violet eyes which could only have been the result of bitter experience.

Ten years ago she had thrown away her dream of romance. Her mother, a querulous invalid had demanded that, for her sake, Lily should marry the man of reputed wealth and forget her post-lover. She had obeyed, only to find that the man she married had no money, that she had indeed cast away the substance for a shadow. She could not bear now to think of the unhappiness she had patiently borne for eight years, only relieved by the love for her boy, but it had left its mark on her nevertheless. It was two years since Roger Drayton had died and Lillian had since worked very hard to keep herself and Eddy, and to send small remittances to her mother who lived in retired seclusion, feeling injured that the world had cheated her out of the luxuries which might have been hers had her only daughter made a wealthy marriage.

"Don't forget the Easter Lily will you Mummy?" "No darling."

The florist's window on the busy street was in dazzling contrast to the general murkiness outside.

Frank Waring stopped and gazed at his poet's heart delighted. Pure stately lilies were there in profusion and he sighed as he noted their unsullied whiteness. There were violets too, and somehow he remembered the violet depths of her eyes as he had looked into them so long ago. And as he turned away with a sigh, he almost bumped into a very little lady who was hurrying towards the florist's.

"I beg your pardon," he murmured. The little lady looked up, smiled and her pale cheeks grew even whiter.

"Lily!"

"Frank!" Dicky thought that it was the most scrumptious Easter time he had ever known. It was so long since they had had any visitors and this Uncle Frank told him some great stories, especially about a lovely place in the country where they were all going to live, where there was a pretty cottage, and where Mummy would not work so hard. There was to be a Shetland pony if he liked and a beautiful garden in the summer. Indeed it seemed like to Wicky the story of some modern Garden of Eden in which they were all going to dwell.

And his elders quite agreed that they had already entered the Garden, but there was no serpent. Love had come into its own.

What a Poor Steer Thinks About

No wonder steers are cheap—think how cheap a steer must feel.

Nobody loves him. Even the man who owns him looks askance at the critter as he nicks an attack on the pile of feed and wonders if he will be worth as much as he ought to be in the spring.

But when one considers "what a beef steer thinks about," there is nothing in the offing to cause him to hoist his tail and bellow with glee. The whole damn family appears to be down on him.

His parents in the old land disown him. Never darken our doors unless you come home to die; cruelly they cable over from the home land. He is worse off than if he was on a raft for a week and then he could make a hurried landing and manage to get along until the regular allowance arrived. Some of the rest of the family try to tell the old folks that he is not such a bad guy. Perhaps a little wild, but if he is allowed to come home for a little while he would become a good citizen of the bovine world and settle down and grow fat and in his maturity be allowed to hang in the halls of beef fame and do his bit in contributing to the demand which has always existed for the roast beef of old England.

The Scots, who are not as especially tender-hearted as we are, are willing to let him stay in their country for a while and they are prepared to vouch that when they handle him for a while he will be able to hold up his horns amongst the best of them. They say his life in the colonies have given him a better constitution, even than that possessed by his Shorthorn and Dobbie ancestors, and after roughing it a little like we have to out in these blasted colonies he will go home and eat and grow fat. Like others who come off a hard trip he may look a little rough when he arrives, but he is healthy enough. He has been bathed to remove any mange crotches that might have been burrowing into his hide and there are no T. B. bugs in his internal economy and his lungs are sound. Bring him right in with the rest of the family and they will not "catch" a thing from him, say the Scots.

But the bad advisers of the parents, who he's had one and the cables again carry the message that the old man never wants to set eyes on him unless he wants to come home to die.

All this you must admit makes an Alberta steer somewhat dejected and for a time he wept large tears like his old country contemporaries when he contemplated the concentrated remains over which he ejaculates: "Alas, my poor brother."

But this is a country of optimism and with the cheerfulness which usually goes with everybody who is in good health, he comes to the decision that if the old man will not let him go home he will go over to his cousin who live just across the line.

Then comes another blow. His cousins also say they are not going to let him come over to see them either. They say he is a good enough fellow and all that, but there are too many at home now and they are just not going to have him around at all. They are even less lacking in sentiment than the old folks. For they will put a tax on his remittance if they should he shippe d over.

It's surely a tough old world for a tender steer.

Yes, and even if he home he gets the worst of it. Because some damned old cow gets diseases and turn out to be poor eating—when you know it they'll en put a condemnation tax on a cheerful, healthy, rollicking Alberta steer.

Honestly, it's enough to make a steer wish he had been killed as a fatted calf.—Market Examiner.

A FEW RAMBLING REMARKS
BY A PRAIRIE WOMAN

The other day I read of a very sad fatality. Four young children were burned to death when left alone while their parents had gone out for the evening to some place of amusement. They had locked the door and unwittingly, no doubt, had left their own flesh and blood inside to perish.

Was that evening's pleasure worth the risk the parents took in exposing those tender little ones to the dangers which are ever present to unprotected children? Is any pleasure gained by neglecting duty ever, worth the risks of the consequences which may ensue from such neglect? To my mind no words of censure can be too strong for people who will for the sake of a few hours' entertainment, leave their children alone and unguarded in bed. Most people, if they wish to take the trouble, have some friend who would be willing to relieve them for an evening; sometimes there are women who are glad to perform such a service for a very small sum, and if there are no such helpers available then the parents should stay at home or make some arrangement to take it in turns to go out. Marriage and the care of children has its pleasures as well as its pains—maybe the fact that children are a responsibility and tie is one of the pains, but it is more than offset by the pleasure which the love of them brings and the parents who are not willing to take their responsibilities in this regard seriously and cheerfully are not worthy the name.

Can you imagine the horror of that father and mother on their return to find the dead bodies of their innocent children? It was indeed a dreadful retribution and methinks if they possessed any hearts or consciences at all, their punishment must indeed have been a bitter one in the anguish and remorse of minds which must have been theirs.

Of what kind of people and influences is your world composed? Have you ever noticed that each one of us, no matter how humble, lives in a world of our own? We are ruled and guided to a great extent by the principles and opinions of the men and women who make our environment. What they think is right becomes right to us. How important then to get we should endeavor to surround ourselves with the right kind of people, the right kind of ideas and ideals! For instance, we stand amazed at the daring of the crook, or society's outlaw, forgetting that the crook and the outlaw live in their own little world applauded and admired by their own circle, to whom the atrocious deeds which we from a lay-abiding standpoint consider as disgraceful, may be considered smart and meritorious facts, and it is for the applause of his world that for the criminal and the sharper works, amazing often the great world by his audacity. It is from the knowledge that he will receive the plaudits of his near associates that he obtains the strength to defy law and order.

I receive a good many letters and some inquiries from our readers these days in all of which I am exceedingly interested. Those which require an answer by mail I am writing to personally, others will be replied to through these columns. This page is edited by a woman for the benefit of the women who are interested in it.

TWO FRENCH WAYS OF COOKING EGGS

French Fried Eggs

A quantity of fat is required for the proper cookery of French fried eggs, but this fat may be strained and used over and over again. Heat the fat to boiling point using for the purpose a deep pan or kettle and when it gives forth a bluish haze it is ready for the eggs. These must be broken one at a time in separate saucers and glided gently into the fast boiling fat. Immediately they will transform themselves into snow white delicate puff balls and will float on the hot fat like rollers, requiring no turning, and ready in a few minutes for the

Synopsis

Martha, an exceedingly intelligent and beautiful girl of about thirteen years finds herself on the way to Canada from England as the ward of a large institution—there is no accident to the vessel and the passengers are all taken off in life boats. Martha and her little friend Glory, a charming child, also a ward of the institution, come in contact with a Miss Stewart, who is much interested in Martha and gives her her card, and her to appear to him, if ever she needs help. This gentleman who is a person of much distinction in England has a beautiful wife, two sons and a daughter, and she is a great source of anxiety because of her arrogant, selfish ways. The last result of one of her scenes is the resignation of her governess, a Miss Stewart, a young woman of a very good family, but reduced in circumstances, who decides to go to Canada to join her brother Philip, a fine young man who is running a shoe ranch in Saskatchewan. One day as Miss Stewart sits out in the garden an old man shuffles round the house and asks her some questions about the housewife. Before, then, she decides mysteriously to show Anna, Miss Stewart, the photograph of a very beautiful child, whose name she tells her is "Martha" and who is her granddaughter, but she does not want a word in a large institution which sends its children to Canada.

Martha and Glory arrive at the Homes in Canada and Martha has just learned that she is to be separated from Glory and that she is to be placed in Saskatchewan, with a Miss Stewart who is to call for her and take her to her new home. She is very sad and for a moment she is a victim of the child of the photograph of an old man.

The day came at last when Glory was taken to her new home. Mitchell felt abashed as she noted the little pale face and the appealing misery in the depths of her always large eyes. Not that Glory repined audibly. She was only nine but she had already learned the utter futility of attempting to grapple with the "powers that be." There was something pitiful in her new acceptance of the new arrangement which was to separate her from her beloved Martha.

After supper the evening previous to Glory's departure which was to take place on an early morning train, Martha sat beside her with her arm wound affectionately round her neck. Martha was not demonstrative as a general rule, but now her whole heart was in her eyes and she felt she could not do enough to let Glory see how much she loved her.

"You won't forget me will you Martha?"

"No Glory darling, I couldn't forget you. I am going to work hard, hard at my drawing and make money so that we two may have a little cottage—a little white cottage in the country somewhere, when we grow up. I'm going to take care of you and love you always, that will be something to work for. This Miss Stewart is very clever and she is going to teach me and, oh Glory, I have made up my mind to learn everything possible, because the more we know the better position we are in to fight our battle with the world and from what I have seen so far, Glory, it is quite a hard battle."

skimmer. When removed from the fat they must be drained for a moment only, then served at once on a hot plate circled with a wreath of cress or parsley.

French Poached Eggs

This method is rather troublesome, but the results are fine. The Frenchman we are poaching the egg cooked one egg at a time and when it was finished it resembled a soft boiled egg from which all the shell had been removed, leaving the egg whole but not hard. The water was first brought to the boiling point, then a teaspoonful of salt and a tablespoonful of tarragon vinegar were added. When the water began to boil madly an egg was broken into the most tempestuous spot where the agitation produced the smooth oval shape, while the acid in the water hardened the albumen just enough to preserve the egg whole. Fine sauces were served with these eggs.

THE BALANCE OF TRADE

The exchange question which has been militating against Canada has in the last month or so shown some improvement with a better general trend.

This improvement is apparently caused by the increase of Canadian exports as afforded by the official summary of Canadian trade for the month of December last. The figures show that the imports into Canada of goods for consumption during December last year were valued at eighty-five millions, eight hundred and eighty-two thousand, one hundred and fifty-three dollars, as compared with ninety-four million, five hundred and fifty-three thousand, four hundred and thirty-two dollars for December of the previous year, while the value of Canadian products exported in December 1920, was one hundred and forty-nine million, two hundred and eighty-four thousand, three hundred and twenty-five dollars as compared with one hundred and thirty-three millions, five hundred and forty-one thousand, eight hundred and five dollars, December 1919.

These figures mean that the trade position of Canada was better in December, 1920, than in December, 1919, by twenty-four millions, four hundred and thirteen thousand, seven hundred and ninety-nine dollars.

The merchandising account is therefore in our favor and a person would naturally conclude that the exchange question should be adjusted forthwith. It must be remembered, however, that before a true balance of trade is struck the interest on our debt abroad and some other "invisible items" offset a favorable merchandise balance, such obligations averaging about twenty-five millions a month. The chief gain in exports have been in grain and paper and a decrease has been shown to some extent in certain classes of manufactured products due no doubt to the somewhat difficult position which has obtained in Canadian industrial and economic circles during the last few months.

sought by sportsmen, but extremely hard to bring about under the present disorganized conditions. In order to effect such an organization, it is necessary for all leagues at the time of their organization to send in a statement to Mr. Hayden, at The Calgary Herald, seeking affiliation with such a group.

It has long been the desire of the amateur baseballers to compete for a Dominion championship. This can only be realized by the closest co-operation among the officials of the various provinces Alberta being one of the strongholds of amateur baseball, eyes are naturally turned in this direction for some active work toward the formation of such a body.

Must Affiliate to be Eligible

In order to enter for the Canadian baseball tournament it will be necessary for this province to become a unit in the Dominion association. No league or club will be eligible to compete in such a tourney, or even Alberta championship unless associated with the provincial body. Mr. Hayden is now lining up the prospective members of this organization and urges that all league and club officials in the province write him at once.

Draws for the provincial championship will be made by the Alberta Baseball Association. Plans for the Dominion series will also be handled by this body and disputes arising over the eligibility of leagues, clubs or members will be settled by the association. It will commence to function this season and in order to control the situation from the outset it is essential that every organization in the province affiliate—Calgary Herald.

Mr. and Mrs. H. R. Osmond spent the week end visiting friends in Calgary.

Seeing so many of the fair sex running around under spring hats almost convinces one that it is summer.

Mr. P. R. Goehoe, who has been a well known and respected farmer of this district for some years past, left for Hampshire, U. S. A. accompanied by his son Hale, on Tuesday night. Mr. Goehoe intends to take up his home in the States for the future.

Messrs P. R. Reed, Geo. Liesemer, Jim Phillipson and J. V. Berscht were all visitors at the Horse Show and so don't check heads with the Duke and Duchess and enquired after their health. We were there ourselves but unfortunately their Highnesses were so fully occupied with other social duties that we were left out of the doings.

Mr. R. Wallace, Assessment Commissioner for the City of Calgary, was in town for a day or two last week adjusting the valuation and assessing town property and business places for town purposes. Mr. Wallace is an expert in his line and the rate-payers can feel that his adjustments are reasonable. He made quite a few changes, some property being lowered considerably and others raised.

Court Dismisses Charge of Horse Theft

At noon on Tuesday, Mr. Justice Simmons dismissed the charge of theft brought against Frank J. Rook of Didsbury, by the Soldiers' Settlement Board. He also dismissed an alternative charge of obtaining money by false pretences, laid by the prosecution, when the charge of theft could not be sustained.

A large number of witnesses gave evidence regarding the terms of the sale as communicated to them. His Lordship held that there was no completed sale until the bargain which Marsden, the returned soldier for whose benefit the farm and stock was approved of by the Soldiers' Settlement Board, and the delivery made; the approval being given on June 9th, and delivery taken later in the same month.

Joseph T. Shaw acted for the crown. M.H. Staples watched the case for the Soldiers' Settlement Board, and J. Mc Kinley Cameron defended the accused.—Calgary Herald.

STRONG MOVE IN FAVOR OF BALL GROUP

Amateur ball clubs and leagues throughout the province are whipping into shape and the players are lining up for a big season. More than a dozen senior leagues will flourish in Alberta during the summer months and at the close of the regular schedules, attention will be turned to the provincial championship series and possibly a Dominion tournament. Outside of the individual league officials, Alberta lacks a central baseball organization, and it will be a matter of extreme difficulty to arrange a satisfactory series at the end of the season.

If the hopes of amateur baseball promoters are to be realized, in this direction, a provincial association must be formed at once. C. A. Hay, Necessary for Play Off

It has been the experience in the past that championship series are denuded of interest by the Canadian Amateur Baseball Association is endeavoring to secure the co-operation of the leagues and club officials of Alberta for the purpose of going ahead with the formation of such a unit.
